These skills include a review of human systems such as the digestive, respiratory, motor, circulatory, excretory, and the immune systems. Additional topics may be covered on an as needed basis. (5 weeks, 40 hrs.)

- Identify carbohydrates, lipids, proteins
- List and explain the basic functions and types of enzymes.
- Describe the importance of the oxygen delivery system; explain the functioning of the gas exchange and transport system.
- Describe the key features of the circulatory system, including the components of blood, the functioning of the heart and regulation of blood flow; explain the effects of exercise on blood pressure and pulse.
- Explain the functioning of the key features of the immune system.
- Identify the central components of the excretory system; discuss filtration and internal equilibrium.
- Describe kidney dysfunction.

Course Overview:

This course uses a variety of teaching/learning methods including discussion, personal reflection, experiential exercises, student presentations, role-plays, group activities and especially case studies. Our faculty aims to create a learning environment where the learner is actively engaged in inquiry, critical thinking and problem solving. The classroom provides you with a place where you can learn with and from others in a cooperative and collaborative manner.

You are expected to take a very active part in class discussions and take responsibility for your own learning. Be a positive and co-operative team member. Columbia College uses a facilitation model of instruction where the facilitator's role is to facilitate your learning. The expectation is that you will come to class prepared with pre-class homework completed. Your facilitator will engage you in activities that are based on your completed homework and readings. Your enthusiastic and positive approach in the classroom will create an atmosphere that will help every student develop the knowledge, skills and attitudes that are needed for success.

How you conduct yourself in our classes will, to a large extent, mirror your conduct in society and your future work site. For example, if you have a tendency to ask questions, challenge the ideas of others in a respectful manner, draw out the best from your colleagues, and encourage both group development and task accomplishment in this class, it is likely you will do the same at work. A high level of student involvement and developing professionalism is expected in the classroom as you work towards your goal.
